

EVERYDAY HEALTH.COM
January 23, 2008

Kerasal Callus Removal Cleansing Pads

Even in winter — or is it especially in winter? — my feet get a little scruffy. But I'm not as apt to get pedicures as regularly as I do in the summer; for one thing, it's just too cold to walk home in flip flops and, for another, besides my karate instructor, not many people actually see my feet. Between the lack of TLC, the closed toed shoes and drier air, my tootsies are definitely worse for the wear.

That's why I was an instant fan of the Kerasal Callus Removal Cleansing Pads. The disposable pads have an abrasive side for sloughing dead skin and a softer side that helps wash it away. I personally love that they're single use and you throw them out when you're done — there's no sitting around, potentially breeding germs like a pumice stone might.

They're great for the guys out there, too. My boyfriend was complaining about his rough feet so I handed him a pad. He ended up stealing the whole pack!

10 pads for $5.99. Available at Wal-Mart and other drugstores. Check 'em out at Kerasal.com

Anne Fritz, Custom Solutions Editor

Posted: Wednesday, January 23, 2008 | 0 Comment\(s\)